BUSINESS DAY IN MADISON 2011

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 2011

Monona Terrace Convention & Community Center
One John Nolen Drive, Madison

Voters shifted the paradigm in November 2010 from a big-government, centralized bureaucratic model to a decentralized, small government model dedicated to personal and economic growth.

But will elected representatives rethink the role of government in American life? Will they reform the processes where government has a legitimate role? And will they operate government in a cooperative manner with the private sector to rebuild our nation's economy?

RETHINK: It's a new day in American politics, culture and business. From here forward, you'll run your business and checkbook very differently. In the 2010 midterm elections, voters said goodbye to spending and borrowing as a way of life; saving, thrift and solid value are coming back.

REFORM: A mandate has been issued to our elected officials: restore fiscal and regulatory sanity in Wisconsin for economic growth and job creation.

REBUILD: Whether the issue is health care cost and quality, global competitiveness of American industry, or the burgeoning national debt, the coordinated national response in Washington D.C. and the state capitols must match the magnitude and urgency of these challenges to the American economy.

Opening Session - Dr. Larry Sabato

Dr. Sabato is a highly respected commentator on the United States Congress, and Washington in general. He has proposed a series of basic reforms to focus Congress and the Presidency on policymaking by getting elected officials away from perpetual campaigning that currently drives fiscal policy and lawmaking in Washington, DC.

Keynote Address - Stuart Varney

Mr. Varney shares his most pivotal reminder: America, and only America, has the flexibility and confidence to lead the world out of the financial crisis and come out stronger than ever.

Special Guest - Governor Chris Christie (invited)

Governor Chris Christie (R-NJ) balanced his state's budget and closed the deficit without tax hikes. His philosophy of fiscal constraint is a blueprint for Wisconsin's elected officials to balance the state budget without tax hikes or increased regulation.

Special Guest - Congressman Paul Ryan (invited)

Congressman Ryan's vision, "A Roadmap for America's Future," draws on Americans' strengths to restore the nation's legacy of leaving the next generation better off.

Governor's Address - Governor-Elect Scott Walker (invited)

Governor Walker has declared "Wisconsin is Open for Business." Swept into office on a platform of limited government and job creation, Walker has committed to fostering a positive business climate that will further the creation of 250,000 jobs in four years. Walker has called a special session on job creation dedicated to creating a business climate that allows companies to thrive and create jobs.
